

A Man Made Blind

While the Good News of Jesus was being preached in Jerusalem, Paul and Barnabas started on their new adventures.

After leaving Antioch, they journeyed to the island of Cyprus and travelled toward the city of Paphos, preaching the Word of God.

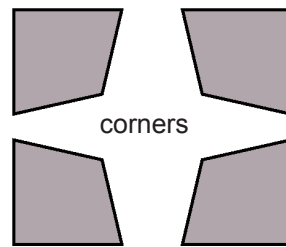

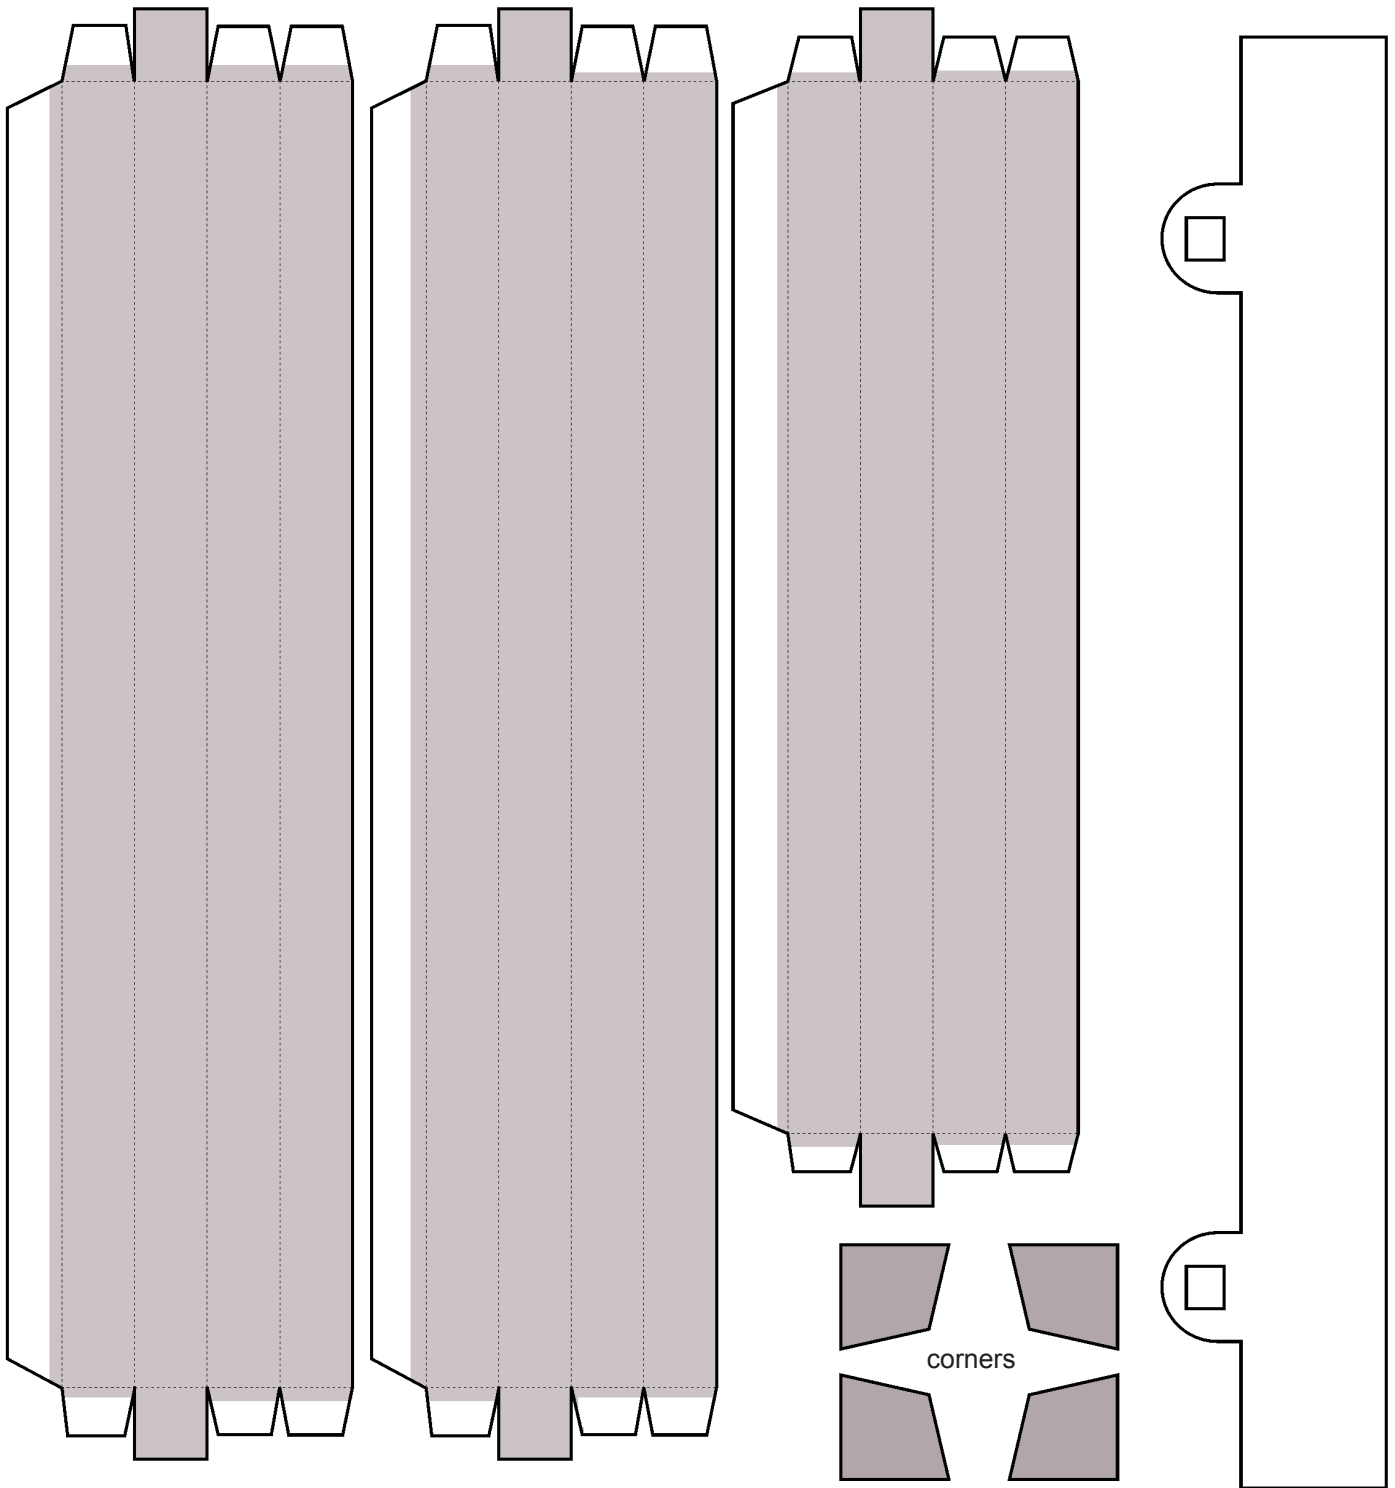

In Paphos, the Roman governor Sergius Paulus, enquired of their mission and summoned them to come see him. But while talking to the Governor, a man, a sorcerer called Elymas started to mock Paul and opposed his teaching.

Empowered by the Spirit of God, Paul rebukes Elymas and immediately the Lord temporarily blinded him. Astonish by the power of God, Sergius Paulus believed and was converted.

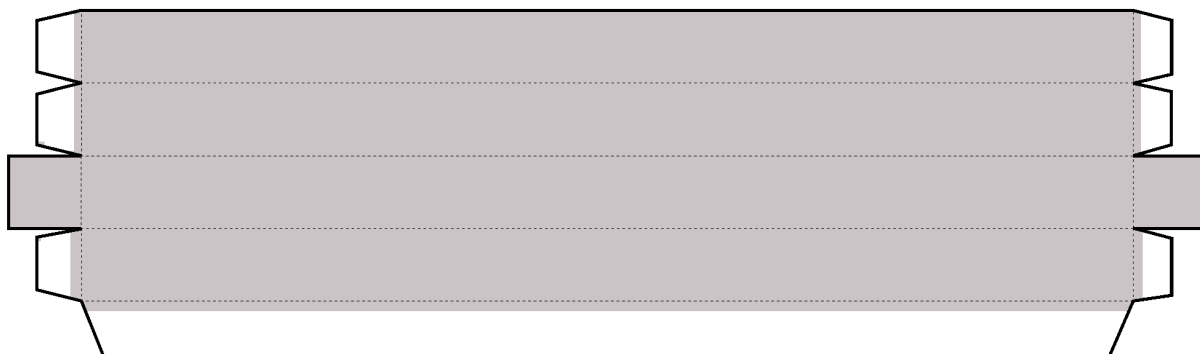

This was the beginning of Paul's first Missionary Journey, which eventually took him all the way to the city of Rome and the Emperor.
