

The Town of Sychar

Mentioned only once in the New Testament, Sychar was a small Samaritan town located close to a place where the patriarch Jacob had dug a well.

The city's Biblical link has to do with the visit of Jesus to Jacob's Well and His meeting with the Samaritan woman. On His way to Galilee, Jesus passed through the country of Samaria. Due to being tired from the journey, He stopped at a well by the small town Sychar.

While His disciples went into the town to buy food, Jesus stayed and rested by the well. A woman came to draw some water and talked with Jesus.

Jesus told her many things. He told her about life giving water that gives eternal life and how God is Spirit. She was so happy from what she learned from Jesus that she then ran to tell everyone in the town, and on that day many people in Sychar came to believe in Jesus as Christ.
