Heroes of Faith - Lydia

Heroes of Faith - Lydia

In a vision in the night, a man from Macedonia appears to Paul asking him to come and help his people. So Paul and his companion set out on a new journey to Philippi, an important city in Macedonia.

On the Sabbath day, Paul talked to a group of women who were assembled by a river, a place of prayers. There, one woman in particular listened intently to Paul's message. Her name was Lydia. She was a seller of purple cloth and was probably considered a woman of status.

God opened Lydia's heart to receive the wonderful news about Jesus. She was converted and baptized, as well as all of her household, and she invited Paul and his companion to stay at her house for the time of their visit.

The conversion of Lydia marked an important new step in the spreading of the Gospel westward.

Read the story of Lydia in Acts 16:11–15.
